To The Husband of My Dreams

Anniversary 34, March 16, 2020

When I was young and full of dreams of a future husband and our life together, I can honestly say I would not have chosen you.

I was living in the world and for the world looking for the thrills and pleasures of sin. All of which brought along with them deep pain and wounds.

But then one day, God got a hold of my heart and there was a huge change in my thoughts and desires. No longer did the thrills and pleasures of sin bring satisfaction to my heartfelt needs.

I was so elated with my new understanding of the love of God for me, I mistakenly thought that was all I needed and desired.

But God knew the dreams of my heart that I did not know and brought you into my life. It did not take long until you were in my dreams as well as in my heart.

The vows I made to you 34 years ago today have not been fulfilled. I have not always put you first but have been selfish and careless with your heart.

Please forgive me and allow me again to vow to put you and your needs above my own, to love, cherish and honor you from now on.

I thank the Lord for looking deeper into my heart than I could ever do and choosing you, the true husband of my dreams to fulfill my hearts desire.

And I thank you for your willingness to follow God's promptings and for your commitment and self sacrificing love through these many years.

May God grant us eternity together.

With love, Cindy